SCHOOL REPORT.

FOUR CORNERS.—The school for the year was taught by Miss Nellie Putnam, who was successful in the training of the little flock placed under her care.

EAST VILLAGE.—The summer and fall terms were taught by Miss Clara B. Barton, who met with success.

As the winter term was taught by one of the school board, we will simply say that the scholars showed an earnest desire to learn, and throughout the term attended to their work with zeal.

FLAT SCHOOL.—Summer term taught by Miss Nellie Shattuck. The deportment of the scholars at the close of the term reflected credit upon the work of the teacher. The fall term was taught by Miss Ada P. Wellman, who we think earnestly tried to do her duty. The winter term was taught by Miss Clara B. Barton. Miss Barton here fully sustained her former reputation of being a successful teacher.

RYDER'S CORNER —Summer term taught by Miss Jennie L. Murray. Miss Murray is a teacher of experience, and those who attended regularly made excellent progress.

As the fall term was taught by a member of the board the report of East Village school for winter term will suffice for both.

The winter term, taught by Miss Etta M. Ryder. Owing to a storm was prevented from visiting the school at the close, but all reports indicate a profitable term.

BRIGHTON SCHOOL —Summer and fall terms taught by Miss Etta L. Bartlett, who had good success

UNDER THE MOUNTAIN —The Summer term was taught by Miss Kate Rockwell, and the fall by Miss Nellie Hall. These were the first terms for both of the young ladies, but they entered heartily into their work and profitable schools were the result.

GENERAL REMARKS.

The schools in town for the past year have been quite successful, the teachers all having faithfully tried to perform their duties. The position of teacher, even in a district school, is one of importance and responsibility, for in his charge are placed those who in a few years will take the places of those now actively engaged in business. This being the case how necessary is it then that only such instruction be given as will fit them for useful citizens. The teacher's interest in the progress of his pupils should be such as to make them feel that he has as great, if not a greater interest in their advancement than they have themselves. In this way the teacher will not only arouse the energies of his pupils to accomplish something for the good of mankind, but also foster the same spirit in himself. Great improvement can be made by teachers being more thorough in their instruction.

It is far better for the child to thoroughly understand one problem or exercise than to pass over twenty with only a superficial knowledge of them. As in everything else, so in school work, thoroughness in the end gains the goal. And in order to acquire this thoroughness we must commence at the foundation, as when the child first enters school, try and have every point clear before passing on to another, and so on to the end of the term. If this was done a much greater proficiency would be shown by the scholars in our common schools.

Do not let the pupil rely too much upon the text book, but have him so thoroughly acquainted with the subject he is studying, if in Arithmetic, that he can perform his examples without the aid of the book. Parents also have an important part to perform in regard to schools. They should, if possible, have their children attend regularly. Of course there are cases where this is impossible, but a little forethought would remedy a great deal of the irregular attendance in our schools. How can a scholar be expected to make any progress who is obliged to stay out of school two or three days every week? The Teacher may work as hard as he can, but it will be impossible for such a scholar to keep up with his class, thus losing the benefit of the school for himself and in a measure hindering the progress of the rest.
